DETAILED ACTION

The indicated allowability of claims 1-5, 7, and 8 is withdrawn. Rejections based on the newly cited reference(s) follow.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1,2,7, 10, 15, and 18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Hearfield.

Hearfield discloses the use of a protective instrument cover comprising a front portion that extends over substantially an entire front surface of a stringed instrument body and is between the stringed instrument body and a string of the stringed instrument body; and means for attaching the front portion of the front surface of the stringed instrument body without requiring removal of hardware if the stringed instrument body (see figure 1). The protective front and back cover with stretchable material (11) cover as disclosed by Hear field covers a guitar (column 6, lines 45-50).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

Art Unit: 2837

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 4 and 12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hearfield in view of Britto et al.

Hearfield does not disclose the specific use of a spandex material.

Britto discloses the use of a cover for a musical instrument using a spandex material (column 4, lines 24,25).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the stretchable cover as disclosed by Hearfield to include the use of a spandex material as disclosed by Britto in order to provide a flexible protective cover for a musical instrument.

5. Claims 3 and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hearfield in view of Wise, Jr.

Hearfield does not disclose the use of a neoprene material.

Wise discloses the use of a neoprene material for a musical instrument (column 4, lines 7-8).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the stretchable cover as disclosed by Hearfield to include the use of a neoprene material as disclosed by Wise in order to provide cover for a musical instrument with non slip characteristics.

6. Claims 5 and 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hearfield in view of Toth.

Hearfield does not disclose the specific use of a spandex material.

Toth discloses the use of a cover for a musical instrument using latex material (column 2, lines 20-,22).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the stretchable cover as disclosed by Hearfield to include the use of latex as disclosed by Toth in order to provide a protective cover for a musical instrument with sufficient elasticity.

7. Claims 8 and 16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hear field in view of Messina.

Hear field does not disclose the specific use of a zipper.

Messina discloses the use of a cover for a musical instrument with attachment means that includes a zipper (22).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the stretchable cover as disclosed by Hear field to include the zipper as disclosed by Messina in order to provide a securing mean for a flexible a musical instrument cover.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed 8/29/05 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. The applicant argues a lack of motivation for combining the references.

However the cited references are all directed to a cover for a musical instrument, the differences being a variance of stretchable materials. In response to applicant's argument that there is no suggestion to combine the references, the examiner recognizes that obviousness can only be established by combining or modifying the teachings of the prior art to produce the claimed invention where there is some teaching, suggestion, or motivation to do so found either in the references themselves or in the knowledge generally available to one of ordinary skill in the art. See In re Fine, 837 F.2d 1071, 5 USPQ2d 1596 (Fed. Cir. 1988) and In re Jones, 958 F.2d 347, 21 USPQ2d 1941 (Fed. Cir. 1992). The Britto patent is used because Britto discloses the use of a specific material to protect a musical instrument. Britto is not cited for structural purposes. The structural elements in the Hearfield reference meet the applicant's structural elements of the applicant's invention with the exception of a zipper. The zipper is clearly disclosed in the musical instrument cover as disclosed by Messina. Even though Hearfield recites leather as being an "ideal material" as the applicant argues, Hearfield does not specifically disclose that his cover can only be made from leather. Furthermore, Hearfield clearly discloses the use of a of a protective instrument cover comprising a front portion that extends over substantially an entire front surface of a stringed instrument body and is between the stringed instrument body and a string of the stringed instrument body; and means for attaching the front portion of the front surface of the stringed instrument body without requiring removal of hardware if the stringed instrument body. The protective front and back cover with stretchable material (11) cover as disclosed by Hear field covers a guitar (column 6, lines 45-50).
